THE CORONATION ON MAY 12th
1937 OF THEIR MAJESTIES

In the realm of royal events and ceremonies the coronation on May 12th of the British Sovereign King George VI and Queen Elizabeth will take precedence over all previous Coronations in royal display of pageantry, pomp and parade.

For months preparations have been under way on a larger scale than for any preceding similar event. Preparations call for a more lavish expenditure than for any previous coronation, this of course in keeping with the trend of times.

The "Eyes of the World" have been and will follow the Coronation with a very special almost personal interest.

The monumental cause for the unusual interest arises from various sources—first is the close contact by radio and press of all the intimate preliminaries being broadcast to the four corners of the earth, secondly for the first time the dominions of the Commonwealth are all having a larger part, but transcending these and all others, is the keen time of testing to which the British people the world over, and the British Constitution was subjected during the "crisis" and foundation-shaking days of November, when the ex-King Edward, now Duke of Windsor's abdication hung in the balance, the sealer for and against abdication and the British Constitution now up, now down.

They were days of sore distress, no matter on which side your sympathies inclined. The Duke of Windsor, who had been a world favorite, for reasons that are too well known, to need repeating abdications of his own free will. He knew none better, that the Constitution of Britain must stand supreme, not the individual—else the break up of the British Commonwealth would result, which condition none would more keenly regret than himself.

From this tempest tossed sea of distress the British Ship of State and the cargo the British Constitution and the British people emerged into comparatively calm waters to acknowledge the then Prince George and his wife as King and Queen.

Their majesties have established themselves in the hearts of their people as worthy examples of all that is best in the tradition of kingship.

They will emulate the virtues in home and state so strongly established by King George V and Queen Mary.

Through all those tragic circumstances of the preceding months the British Crown and Constitution has passed to a more secure foundation.

The development of the monarchy the rights of the people and the duties of the Crown through the years, is an interesting story, and today freedom and justice, are the culminating qualities that guide the power that lies behind the throne.

It will be a magnificent spectacle that passes alone London's streets on May 12th. An assemblage of color, pomp and wealth almost unexampled in its entire effect.

We wonder as they did, in the Scriptures whether some of the time this expended might not better have been distributed among the needy, and this feeling arises without any question of disparaging it may be that their majesties, might echo similar thoughts could they freely do so.

However we most fervently wish for them a long, a happy and a peaceful reign.

The Coronation
There will be pageantry and wealth and power,
Lays of their country—pride of an ancient birth;
(Oh! London throbbing to her might; hour
Where meet the kings and princes of the earth.
The scarlet of a flag, the flash of swords,
The slowly passing of her mighty lords.

There will be humble folk in quiet dress
Lining the streets to see the King go by.
The lift of mantle in the sunny air,
A thousand crimson banners in the sky.
Gay laughter—little children tenderly
Lifted above the crowd so they can see.

And under all the pageantry and pride
The sturdy heart of England true and great
Boats out its quiet round of destiny
And far beneath the power of church and state,
The little common working fellow stands
And holds the night of England in his hands.
Edna Jones.

CORONATION NUMBER

The Christian Science Monitor has published a very interesting and comprehensive Coronation number. The paper comprises about 76 pages. Cuts of interesting features of the various dominions, interesting articles, historical and personal advertisements of British firms contribute to an issue which has accumulated a very great amount of work and planning and written in that excellent style which characterizes the Monitor's daily publication.

The Coronation Number is a gracious tribute of a paper from a country outside the British Commonwealth. We do not choose to use the word foreign.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. Strange
Director "Crop Testing Plan"

A great scarcity of wheat exists!

The world is short 500 million bushels of wheat for its consumptive needs!

Such are the types of newspaper headlines that have appeared in recent months. They afford to most people a satisfactory reason to explain why price bounded up from $1.00 last fall to $1.50 recently.

During the last three weeks, however, price has fallen some 20 cents a bushel. Many are wondering why this should be if there really exists such a deficiency of wheat in the world as the newspaper headlines indicate.

The answer is that the headlines have given us entirely the wrong impression. There is no scarcity of wheat in the world, as most people understand the word "scarcity." The truth is that the supplies available for overseas export are scarcer than usual, but are far from being actually deficient.

The average world carry-over, on August 1st each year, is about 600 million bushels. On August 1st next the carry-over will be scarcer than this, but will still be about 500 million bushels, which, of course, is a lot of wheat. The United States will have about 100 million, and Canada some 40 million still left on hand.
